The Lake Margrethe Extension Group met Wednesday Jan. 11, at the home of Mrs. John McMillan with Mrs. Edna Collins as hostess and Mrs. Signe Randolph and Mrs. McMillan as co-hostesses. After a short business meeting Mrs. Lilian Ryan gave an interesting talk on remodeling clothing, after which light refreshments were served. The next meeting will be on February 8, with Mrs. George Freer, with Mrs. Van Smith and Mrs. Jerome Strong as co-hostesses.

Blue Ox, Babe Rivalled By Whale

Paul Bunyan's blue ox, "Babe," who once got thirsty and drank up a large part of the Great Lakes, has been rivalled by the exploits of the not-so-legendary "Amiable Whale" who taught over 300,000 residents of the State of Michigan to swim and cut the state's drowning rate almost in half. The blue ox faded to light turquoise when the "whale" went on to teach some 71,000 Michigan people how to save lives and revolutionized fashions in women's bathing suits.

It all happened in the early days of this century and laid the foundation for a nation-wide program which has made swimming both a safe and popular pastime for millions of Americans. The "Amiable Whale" was the late Wilbur E. Longfellow, 300-pound swimming teacher, a descendant of Longfellow the poet, and the first national director of the Red Cross Water Safety Service. His nickname, which he bore graciously, stemmed from his tremendous bulk, his sunny disposition, and his ability to float like a rubber raft.

Michigan first took stock of itself in 1918 after Longfellow visited Detroit and other cities to promote and teach volunteer life saving. Drowning figures were appalling. Life guards were as rare as two-piece bathing suits, and the few swimming teachers were all drowning their pupils by dunking them in contraptions that resembled colonial ducking stools.

Longfellow's life saving campaign against aquatic fatalities. Very nearly an island, with 2,400 miles of shoreline and more than 5,000 inland lakes, the state was a huge water hazard for poor or careless swimmers.

Michigan went to work. In the "whale's" wake life saving corps sprang up throughout the state, beginning with the famous Corp. No. 1 in Detroit. Athletic young men employed by the Red Cross went into across the state, teaching the fundamentals of practical swimming.

As life saving got off to a good start in Michigan, a funny thing happened that shook the fashion world. The Life Saving Corps No. 1, widely publicized in the press, won recognition immediately, retreating water fronts, making dramatic rescues, and giving valuable life saving demonstrations.

In an era of rampant feminism, the ladies of Detroit were soon demanding to be admitted to the all-male corps. This the men opposed, with some reason, since ladies' bathing suits of the day were more suitable for football than swimming. Modestly clad in long heavy stockings, rubber shoes, bloomers below the knees, and full overskirts. The women, however, persisted and quoted Longfellow who sincerely advocated life saving for all. With the men's dictation, the Red Cross recognized the Women's Life Saving Corps. Victory, this in sight, the women were not to be stopped by the mere dictates of fashion. But by bit the unwieldy parts of their costumes were discarded, and, as a result, women's figures were rediscovered with the adoption of scanty, but sensible swimming suits. It might be noted that the epoch-making change also marked the infusion of new life into the calendar business.

No statistics are available on how many pounds of sunburn have been measured on slender backs, how many of the new-fashioned "permanents" were ruined in the process. What is known is that the little round emblem given them to sew on their bathing suits became a badge of honor among emancipated womanhood.

Today it is estimated that nearly half of the 500,000 or more persons who complete Red Cross swimming courses each year are girls and women. Among the 26,431 Americans currently authorized as Red Cross swimming individual high swimmers, Joe Legge second with 561. Sixteen others had series of 500 or better. A 222 by Joe Cicciola was the high individual single game with Legge again second with a 218. In all eleven Shingles Shoppers were sixth and were bowled last week.

Don Bishop won an 178 average was first in the average race with Matt Blivie second and Al Chervin third. Both had 173 averages but Blivie had 3 extra points to his credit. Dave Cook was fourth with 170 and Frank Bennett fifth with 168. Bob Bennett was sixth and Joe Legge seventh. Each had 167 averages with Bennett having an edge in extra pins. Jack Wade was eighth with a 166 average and George Quinn was ninth and Larry Denewitt tenth, each with 165 averages but again Quinn had a few more extra pins.

High marks of the first half of the season were: High individual game, 247 by Barney Sajdak; individual series, 627 by Al Chervin; high team single game, 976 by Grayling Restaurant; high team three games, 2840 by Hoerl's Tavern.

The City Tournament has been set for February and the entry deadline is midnight, February 1. Trophies will be awarded this year as well as cash prizes to the winners it was announced.

Will Congress Sell Out?

The new session of Congress may do much to decide whether we are to continue down the road that end in statism and dictatorial government, or whether we are to reaffirm the principles and the ideals that made us a great, free and prosperous people.

A determined effort is being made to fasten the welfare state idea upon the country. Congress will be asked to appropriate billions for cradle-to-the-grave security measures—all of which, of course, would be compulsory. The only logical reasoning behind proposals of this character is that the American people are no longer capable of taking care of themselves, that independence, thrift, self-reliance and pride are obsolete virtues, and that we must follow the sorry example of near-bankrupt Europe and dictator-ridden Russia.

An equally determined effort will be made to extend government ownership and domination of industry and enterprise. This naturally goes hand in hand with the welfare state—the cloth is cut from the same bolt. The principal target of the socialists is and has long been the light and power industry. Inasmuch as electricity enters into almost every industrial, domestic and agricultural activity, political control of it would create, in effect if not in name, a monopoly over land, water, basic natural resources, and the instruments of production. The completed and proposed valley authorities are perfect examples of this.

The basic issue was well put by General Eisenhower when he said, "Government ownership or control of property is not to be desired principally because of the historic inefficiency of governmental management. Its real threat rests in the fact that, if carried to the logical extreme, the final concentration of ownership in the hands of government gives to it, in all practical effects, absolute power over our lives." That fine statement should be on every Congressman's desk. We are nearer than we realize to giving government such power.
